The present invention provides a new method for analyzing and testing a given design, which may be a manufacturing drawing or a software design, by simulating the CNC machine manufacturing process that would result from installing the given design on a CNC controller. A three-dimensional model of the design is created, either using a vector-based computer graphics program, or by electronic scanning the original manufacturing drawing, or a CAD system. Digital images of the model are then drawn into a frame buffer which is rendered by the computer using a graphics pipeline.
